I live in a flat in Bournemouth. It's in a modern building, about three miles from the city centre.

The old buildings look nicer, I think, but my friend lives in an old building and it's very cold. My flat isn't.

My friend's flat is noisier than mine too. It's next to a busy road and it's on the ground floor. Strangers often look through her windows. My flat is on the fourth floor so I never have that problem.

I can see the sea from my balcony too. I love that.

There's a shop three minutes' walk away. It sells groceries, but it doesn't sell fresh bread, unfortunately.

When you enter my flat, there's a long hallway in front of you. There's a toilet on the left and a useful space on the right. I keep shoes and coats here, and it's also big enough for my bike.

Next on the right is the living room. It's big and light and has a balcony and sea view. I love this room, so I always keep it tidy. It has a lovely blue sofa. It was expensive, but it's so comfortable. I love it!

The kitchen is opposite the living room. It's small and has a view of a hill, so that's nice too.

Next to the kitchen is the bathroom. It has a shower over the bath and a washbasin, but no toilet.

My bedroom is at the end of the hallway. That's a big room too. But there are a lot of things in this room. My clothes, books, guitar, desk and computer. It's never tidy.
